Four Dead In Kansas Twister

LOGAN FUNERAL HELD TUESDAY

Father of Mayor Succumbs Suddenly Sunday
PIONEER CITIZEN

Resident of 21 Years To Be Buried in Greenlawn

Funeral services for J. B. Logan, 76, father of Mayor J. P. Logan, who died suddenly at his residence, 1549 Ninth street early Sunday, will be conducted from the residence Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Rev. A. A. Godber, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, officiating. Burial will be made in Greenlawn cemetery under the direction of J. E. Grammer, undertaker.
Mr. Logan had resided in Port Arthur for the past 21 years, coming to this city from Cedar Bayou, Texas, and for many years operated a grocery store at 347 Sixth street, retiring from active business some time ago. He was unusually hale and in good health for his age, and his death early Sunday was a shock to his family and friends. His death was the cause of his death, the end coming peacefully.
Born in Polk County, Texas, on June 17, 1848, Mr. Logan lived the greater part of his life in a frontier town. He was a pioneer citizen, a citizen on the trails between Texas and Kansas, later returning to Grand Cherokee, La., where he spent about 15 years, and then returned to Port Arthur in 1909.

MILLION DOLLAR DAMAGE DONE

Four Known Dead, Score Persons Injured
TROOPS RUSHED IN

Wichita Hurries to Aid of Neighbor
Augusta, Kans., July 14.—Four dead, several injured and property damage estimated at $1,000,000 was the toll of a cyclone which swept a semi-mile path through southwestern Kansas last night.
Augusta is a wilderness of debris. The city was struck by both a tornado and a cyclone. While a gale of cyclonic nature was blowing from the north, a tornado struck the west edge of the city and then swept through the main part of the town demolishing the stone catholic church and wrecking practically every business building on State street. The main street of the city, Property Bank, will exceed one million dollars.
Following the storm a dire straits rain poured over the city, baptizing the work of rescuers who were clearing streets and searching through ruined buildings. The town was in darkness and the work was hampered through the use of automobile lights and flashlights. The electricity was turned off immediately after the storm struck, a precaution which probably averted more deaths and prevented numerous fires.
Men, women and children slipped and waded through the mud in an effort to determine the damage done to their homes and to make sure that some of their friends were covered under plaster and splintered roofs.
AID IS RUSHED FROM WICHITA
WICHITA, July 14.—Wichita hurried to the aid of Augusta following the storm, rescue parties reaching there less than two hours after the city was piled high in debris. About 12 physicians and a number of nurses were among the first to go.
Captain J. G. Yeager and A. C. Johnson and A. C. Hensley, Wichita detectives, were probably the first to reach the stricken city following the storm and brought back first definite accounts of the damage.
The fact that scores of Wichitans and persons from other surrounding cities flocked to Augusta to view the wreckage made rescue and patrol work more difficult and it was being planned early this morning to close roads leading into the city.

Saint was stricken suddenly with heart disease last Tuesday, the end coming Saturday morning. For the past 13 years Saint was connected with the Texas Company here, and at the time of his death was chief clerk in the Port Arthur office. He resided in Port Arthur for the past 25 years.

Word reached here that informers in the vicinity of Canton had told of seeing two men in the army officer's car and that one of them had asked for water with which to wash away blood stains.
Authorities believe Major McLeary has been murdered and his body concealed. They could supply no motive.

Port Arthur's Woman Delegate Tells Story Of Davis' Nomination

Texas' Delegates in Tears With Old Romans of Senate as Final Choice Heals Party Wounds

Tears streamed as the democratic convention fought its way to a close and nominated John W. Davis for president and Calvin Coolidge for vice president. The delegates from Port Arthur were among the first to shed tears when Davis was named.
"I just stood on my chair and cried and cried," Mrs. Leeco said as she got in Beaumont, where she arrived this morning from New Orleans. "When I saw those old governors and senators, gray-haired, parading around for Davis, with tears in their eyes, I didn't think anything about my tears."
Texas Gives Way
When state after state began to break away from the solid ranks of McAdoo and Smith, the nomination of Davis became increasingly apparent, and Texas finally gave away and sent her 40 votes to the Davis column.
"Of course, the delegates didn't want to, and they all shed copious tears, just like I did."
The Smith folks didn't care who got it, except that they didn't want McAdoo to have it," said Port Arthur's woman delegate. The Smith delegates preferred Underwood to Davis. Mrs. Leeco said, but when California tore away from McAdoo, her own son, and Pennsylvania, a Smith state, came in for Davis, the other Smith forces rapidly began voting for Davis.

Then came the shouting when Davis was nominated. The bands played Dixie over and over again, standards of the states waved wildly, for the most bitter fight in the history of the party had been ended.
"Davis got up and talked, but he was simply overcome. He stopped and swallowed—he simply couldn't talk. He was on the verge of tears, I believe. He's a grand man."
Critiques Smith
Governor Al Smith, the big force opposing McAdoo's nomination, was immensely unpopular with Mrs. Leeco, judging from what she had to say about him.
After the nomination of Davis, the various candidates and political leaders arose to congratulate the convention upon its success, praising Davis, and among them was Smith.
"Smith made a speech, but it was vile—vile," Mrs. Leeco added. "He got up there and talked about what he had done, and all the time it was just 'I and me' and 'I-I-I.'"

CEMENT POURED ON MODEL HOME

Contractors Taking Interest In Foundation

Cement is being poured at the Model Home building being erected in Dryden Place by The News and Port Arthur business men and future home builders are invited to come out and inspect this particular feature. Mrs. M. F. Gill is in charge of the project said today.

The cement contractors and those whose duty it is to build the Model Home foundation have taken great pains to see that the base of the structure is as it should be. The foundation is deeper and more firm than in most buildings, Mrs. Gill asserts.

Foundation Is Deep
"In fact some who visited the building site Sunday across us of digging a well collar instead of a foundation, it was so deep," Mrs. Gill said laughingly this morning.

This week will see the building personally supervised by a representative from the C. B. Schorpp company, architects who drew the plans of the building. The representative will confer with Contractor James and the work proceeded with carefully.

at efforts carried on by the Chamber of Commerce and Shipping during the past six months. Site for his factory has not been designated, but it will be a modern plant, large enough to cover needs for the next several years, it is announced.

The plant will start off with 20 skilled workers.

"This is but the nucleus," Ardner says, "since within a year's time I plan to have at least 100 skilled workers employed within a year's time."

With his brother Ardner owns and operates plants at Enid, Okla., and Fort Wayne, Ind.

New Purchasing Equipment
Port Arthur was chosen for the location of the third plant, he says in a letter to Chamber of Commerce officials, because it offered greater prospects than any of a score of other cities bidding for its location.

Ardner now is in location purchasing equipment and supplies for the new factory.

The Port Arthur climate is ideally adapted to cigar manufacturing, and the favorable location to the West Indies, Louisiana and Kentucky crops should result in Port Arthur becoming a cigar manufacturing center after the way is paved by the inland factory, Ardner said.

MATRON WANTED AT DAY NURSERY

Middle-Aged Woman for Two Weeks Work

The Day Nursery Board is attempting to secure the services of a middle-aged woman to relieve the matron at the Day Nursery and to take charge of the children there while the matron, Mrs. Ciar, is on a two weeks' vacation.

Applicants for this two weeks' position are requested to telephone Mrs. T. Donahoe, phone 1053. Mrs. Donahoe is chairman of the matron committee.

"We desire someone immediately who will take Mrs. Ciar's place for these two weeks," said Mrs. K. A. Young, chairman of the Day Nursery Board this morning. "There are 25 children now in the Nursery to be taken care of, but we feel that it is an absolute necessity to hire Mrs. Ciar a vacation, for she has been faithful in her work as matron of the Nursery for several months, and it is only recently that we have been able to arrange for her to get one afternoon off a week."

SAYS CHURCH NOT HOSPITAL

Evangelist Delivers Stirring
Sermon at Nederland

Special to The News.
NEDERLAND, July 14.—Using Uncle Sam's army as an analogy as to how to live, Evangelist D. W. McElroy of Fort Worth delivered a stirring message on "The Soldier of the Cross" at the Baptist tabernacle last night. Evangelist McElroy's sermon last night concluded a two-week revival being held here under the auspices of the Christian church.

"The church of Jesus Christ is the army of the Lord fighting for righteousness and it is not a hospital to nurse sick sinners into heaven," said Evangelist McElroy.

"In the army of the Lord we must be in service all the time. Some of the characteristics of service are first, that it is volunteer service, there is no draft; second, that this service is full time and for duration of life. There is no armistice in the army of the Lord. We will not and cannot compromise with Satan. There is no such thing as surrender. It's a fight to the finish for Jesus is not going to lay down arms and we cannot. There is no furlough in the army of the Lord and there can be no leave of absence."

Two Armies Compared
In speaking of the enlistment requirements of Uncle Sam's army, Rev. McElroy compared them to the army of Jesus Christ. "In the army of Uncle Sam we must do some things," he said. "In the army of Christ we must also do some things. First, we must have faith and belief in His great cause. We must be true to His ideals and we must lay down our lives on the altar of sacrifice as our buddies did in the World War. Secondly, we must sever our connections with everything that will hinder us in our service for Jesus. We must sever our lives from sin. That's the philosophy of repentance."

RAILROAD TO ISSUE BOOKLET ON TEXAS

STANFORD, Texas, July 14.—The Fort Worth & Denver railroad company, through its agricultural department at Wichita Falls, contemplates the preparation and dissemination of a booklet descriptive of the territory traversed by the line, according to M. E. Oates, agricultural agent. The booklet will be an attractive one, comprehensive and well illustrated. Thousands of them will be sent to inquirers in other states. The placing on the market this fall and winter of tens of thousands of acres of ranch lands for agricultural purposes is expected to stimulate an immense new immigration to the north plains, according to Oates.

They enter—the Fashions—a galaxy in festive attire, bringing with them from Paris, the land of their creation, a breath of the delight of changing seasons. Paris decrees it—and fashion leaders ably express it in every conceivable type of attire.

And so, with colorful notes, the Aristocracy of Fashion ushers in the seasons. From her edict there is no appeal. She is Queen of the World of Women.

Retail Merchants Always Ready

None grasp the full significance of this more than the retail merchant. To him is given the duty of keeping in close touch with, not only the present styles, but to accurately forecast what is yet to come. The retail merchant dealing in women's apparel is fully aware of milady's critical inspection. Quick as is the feminine eye to observe and admire, it is just as quick to detect and condemn half hearted endeavor to please on the part of the merchant.

Her Store

The store catering to women is very dear to the feminine heart. It is an institution and is unconsciously regarded by her as "Her Store." And this is as it should be. For it is through the medium of "Her Store" that women keep in step with the parade of the Fashions. "Her Store" is her main source of information along the lines of style and change.

And so, the up to date store, dealing in women's apparel has resolved itself into one of SERVICE. Stocks of beautiful goods, large and varied, must be carried every day. The merchant must be able to speak authoritatively on style and fashion. He buys far ahead and must be able to gauge accurately the coming demand. He must put his store (on a smaller scale, perhaps) on a plane with the greatest stores in the land. For, be the community large or small, the fashions are the same the country over.

Odds and Ends and Comment on Our Morning Mail

With entirely commendable patience C. M. Panunzio bore the harness while the house committee on immigration put him through his paces. No pains have been taken to count the ounces asked him, but there must have been three thousand. Or perhaps it was not more than eight hundred. Somewhere between the two, if not above or below, lies the truth; and these figures may be accepted as reliable. They were short questions, and they got short answers. The performance was a what-if character, like a rapier. But before it was over, we have the spectacle of the witness taking a bit in his teeth and turning away with his questioner and in the whole story of how one of Isaac Watt's hymns broke in a congressional hearing.

Mr. Baker (Calif.): Are you in favor of foreign-language newspapers?

Mr. Panunzio: I am not. I have always stood against them, and you know it, Judge Baker.

Mr. Baker: I wanted it in the record.

Mr. Panunzio: I am not.

Mr. Baker: Are you in favor of excluding from this country all those who believe—

Mr. Panunzio: Yes.

Mr. Baker (continuing): In and are members of—

Mr. Panunzio: Yes—

Mr. Baker: Or affiliated—

Mr. Panunzio: Yes.

Mr. Baker: Hold on. Let me ask my question.

Mr. Panunzio: I know your question.

Mr. Baker: Wait.

Mr. Panunzio: And I say "yes" before.

Mr. White (Kans.): Judge will you permit an interruption to quote two lines of one of Watt's hymns?

The Chairman: Let us have Watt's hymn.

Mr. White (quoting): He knows the words that you would speak.

Ere from your opening lips they break.

Tucked in among the patent medicine ads of seventy years ago, the Pennsylvania Railroad modestly announced in the Nashville Union and American of June 30, 1864, that it would mail first-class freight from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia or Baltimore, with all charges and dispatch and without change of cars, at the rate of 90 cents per hundred pounds.

The leading hotel of Nashville, in the same newspaper, advertised that its rate for "elegant board" was 75 cents per day, or $1 for man and horse. Readers of a commercial turn at mind were advised that bacon was selling for 4 1/2 cents per pound at Cincinnati, that New Orleans cotton was from 4 to 7 cents a pound, Louisville tobacco from $4.50 to $6.50 a bushel, and Cincinnati whisky "22 cents." Whether the latter quotation was by the gallon, the quart or the drink does not appear. Fifty cents was the day's wages for labor there, and it was an eight-hour day either.

Today hotel rooms, with three meals can hardly be had for 75 cents a day, not to mention less than a pickled pound. Wages are figured by the hour instead of the day and whisky is no longer "22 cents" at Cincinnati or anywhere else.

But in 1924, first-class freight moved from Pittsburgh to Baltimore for 77 cents hundred pounds, and Philadelphia for 79 cents—a cut of 12 and 11 cents, respectively, in the rates of seventy years ago.

It is the fashion these days to say hard things about congress. President Coolidge has laid down what is generally regarded as a sensible and desirable program, but congress appears determined to legislate insofar as it concerns to legislate at all—in exactly opposite directions. Hence we hear from high places such comments as "the worst thing we have at the present time is our American congress" and "American history will be searched in vain for any similar degrading exhibition."

The Senate is especially a target for remarks of this character. Under our original theory of government the house was expected to run more or less wild on occasion, but the senate was to be a bulwark of conservatism. But the senate is unfortunately showing less of restraint than the house at the worst, so that much alarm is being felt in many quarters, and the senators are being accused on all sides of the crime of playing politics.

It is, however, a little difficult to understand why "playing politics" should be regarded as a crime. Under our system of practically universal suffrage the source of governmental power lies with the masses of the people. Majorities elect both representatives and senators—the conservatism and the liberalism are equally derived by the framers of the constitution having been destroyed by the popular election amendment—and it is both natural and right that those elected should act in the way most pleasing to their electors. This is all that "playing politics" consists of, and it is an irrefragable feature of every form of government.

ED BUTTS, AVIATOR OF OKLAHOMA, DEAD

COPPERVILLE, Kans., July 14.—Ed Butts, an aviator of Bartlesville, Okla., was killed when his plane fell from an altitude of about 500 feet a mile northwest of Copperville at 12:50 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

SELECTIVE IMMIGRATION SYSTEM REDUCES ALIEN TIDE FROM EUROPE

A third of a century ago leaders of organized labor in America began their crusade for more drastic immigration laws. They demanded a selective immigration system. This finally led to the three per cent law which cut immigration to 369,556 in 1922 and 322,919 in 1923. Then congress enacted the two per cent law based on the census of 1890.

This new law became effective July 1st and under its provisions it leaves a maximum of less than 175,000 for the new year. This will be made up potentially of 51,207 Germans, 34,007 from Great Britain and Northern Ireland, 28,567 from the Irish Free State, 9,561 Swedes and 6,443 Norwegians.

Since the year 1890 there has been a tremendous immigration from Russia, Greece and Italy. All this has been changed by the new law. The Italian quota for the new year is 3,845, the Russian 2,248 and the Greek 100. Thus the use of two per cent and the 1890 census have made a thorough job both of reducing the number of immigrants and of changing of the tide of aliens from the Mediterranean to Northern Europe.

New comes from the self governing British possessions of North America that Europeans are not barred. These can come and go at will. Mexicans are not barred. Negroes from British West Indies are barred. In recent years West India negroes have been coming in great numbers to the United States.

It is said that the drastic reduction from Europe is likely to reduce the available supply of unskilled labor which has tended to become more difficult to get as native Americans have gone into skilled labor business and professional work.

Mexico is a veritable destroyer of unskilled labor and in the years to come the peon is coming in great numbers to the United States. There will be rough work to be done and the Mexican knows all about rough work. He knows how to handle the pick and the shovel and to swing the ax. He knows how to pick cotton. He knows how to shear sheep. There has been a place left open for him on the American side of the Rio Grande.

EUGENE V. DEBS

Eugene V. Debs is the apostle of American socialism and the venerated leader of the socialists of America. He has carried the national standard in three presidential campaigns and in one election received more than a million votes.

Senator Robert M. LaFollette has been endorsed by the socialists as their nominee for president. Senator LaFollette is not a socialist. He is a republican, running as an independent candidate for president of the United States. Congressman John M. Nelson of Wisconsin is the LaFollette campaign manager and has established headquarters in the city of Chicago.

It goes without saying that Senator LaFollette and his forces plan to take an active part in the congressional elections next fall. They intend to support progressives irrespective of parties. They intend, in so far as possible, to avoid taking on the burdens of any state or legislature or county candidates. On these they will make no endorsements unless they are forced to. According to campaign director Nelson they are very much interested in maintaining their present position of holding the balance of power in both houses of congress. This is the Nelson viewpoint.

"We can't lose. It is within the range of possibility that we can win. We are bound to hold the balance of power in the house and senate."

This is the real purpose of the LaFollette campaign—to throw the election of the next president into congress. If this takes place, then the American Mussolini will be the dictator of American politics. He will dictate who is to be president as well as dictate the legislation that is to come under the new administration.

There is many a slip atwixt the cup and the lip. Senator LaFollette is playing for high stakes. He is playing for all the stakes. He may lose all.

DOHERTY AND THE MILLIONAIRES

Plaintiffs allege in their petition that Doherty wrecked the Empire Company and trimmed them to the extent of $10,000,000. Lord the pickings must have been rich for this man who began life as a newsboy; but did he.

When it comes time for the average man to dig into his pocket, which is usually empty, for taxes he is apt to believe that his rich neighbor is getting more and more wealthy, while he finds it harder to pay his bills each year.

There are two deductions which ought to mollify a man who is in this frame of mind. 1. As near as it is possible to figure, estimates show that if all incomes above $10,000 a year in the United States were divided among all those who make less than $10,000 annually, the net addition to the incomes of the latter would be about 10 per cent.

2. Common labor today probably is being paid more, both in money and real wages, than ever before.

These two deductions seem to indicate that the so-called poor are pretty well off and certainly have a great deal more than in past years. If the wealthy people have lost what the poor gained, the rich have been getting poorer and the poor richer, which means that wealth is drifting away from the rich.

These two deductions seem to indicate that the so-called poor are pretty well off and certainly have a great deal more than in past years. If the wealthy people have lost what the poor gained, the rich have been getting poorer and the poor richer, which means that wealth is drifting away from the rich.

When it comes time for the average man to dig into his pocket, which is usually empty, for taxes he is apt to believe that his rich neighbor is getting more and more wealthy, while he finds it harder to pay his bills each year.

There are two deductions which ought to mollify a man who is in this frame of mind. 1. As near as it is possible to figure, estimates show that if all incomes above $10,000 a year in the United States were divided among all those who make less than $10,000 annually, the net addition to the incomes of the latter would be about 10 per cent.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Big Chris Larson, Alaska cannery foreman, and the hard-drinking Peter Newhall, a cannery launch driver, which puts out to answer a distress signal at sea. The Remittance man, who is a cannery launch driver, and his home in Georgia because of a tragedy. The launch his rocks.

Now go on with the story

In a moment Iran himself was standing at her side, his countenance clouded in sympathy for her. She was ever amazed at this man. He was tall and looked slender, but he knew the iron in those long, easily flowing muscles. There was a dark, foreign look in his handsome face that fascinated her even as it entranced her, something oriental and mysterious that she could not exactly trace or analyze.

He had come out of Russia at the beginning of the revolution, and was hailed at once as a new master of the violin. Before that time he was widely known in the theater of Petrograd and the Russian court, but he had not cured to seek laurels abroad.

"My dear girl," he told her, "my thin face looking like a dark, bowed, and touched it to his lips. Then they took seats, side by side, on the big divan. His voice streamed on, comforting, cheering not only with his carefully chosen though swift-flowing words, but by exquisite modulation of his tones.

"I suppose you'll never forgive me," he said at last, in a more quiet hour.

"I don't see how I owe you anything but gratitude—"

"You know what I mean. You remember—that morning—after the trouble. You remember that when Peter awakened from his drunken sleep and could not remember the fight on the deck at all, he wanted to stay and fight the thing through the courts? It was I, your friend—of course with your help—who induced him to flee. And his flight has ended—by that," He pointed to the telegram.

"I don't see how I owe you anything but gratitude—"

THINLY-CLAD NEGRESS FINED $25 AND COSTS
Nothing but a very thin overdress and a pair of stockings were all that clad the frame of Mattie Bell, negress, before Judge Dyeus in police court this morning.

Mattie, an ex-convict, was led before the judge and the whole court room gasped, gulped and gazed.

"Judge, they stole all my clothes Saturday night and I called the officers and they locked me up for vagrancy," Mattie said.

"So that's the reason you are practically without clothes. You had certainly better prove somebody stole them," Judge Dyeus answered.

Mattie failed to prove them.

Twenty-five and costs, was the fine.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Daddy Cracknuts and his wife, Mrs. Cracknuts, got on the ferris wheel in Mister Zip's amusement park where the Twins were working.

Daddy sat down and his wife sat down beside him and they put their feet on a little place below the seat and held on tight.

Then the wheel began to turn around very, very slowly. And the more the wheel turned the higher Daddy and Ma went.

There were 10 cents on the ferris wheel and every one of the seats was full.

Nancy had helped Mosley Mud Turtle and his son, Mosley Junior, into one of the seats, and then Bunnies and his wife, Mrs. Bunnies, into another of the seats with their nephew, Cutie Cottonball, between them, and Markie Muskkrat and a friend into another seat, and Granddaddy Frog and six of his grandchildren into another seat, and Mister Drake and his wife, Mrs. Drake, into another seat, and the ferris wheel was as full as a can of corn. Really it did seem that if people kept on spending their nickels and dimes the way they were doing, Mister Zip, the fairyman, would certainly make two fortunes!

Well, the wheel kept turning and Daddy and Ma kept going up and up and up.

Right over their heads were Mister and Mrs. Bunnies and right over the Bunnies were the Mud Turtles.

"My goodness, Pa," Daddy Cracknuts and his wife and young Mosley Mud Turtle say, "where are we going? I'm getting nervous. I was never so high up in all my life."

"I—I'm getting a bit dizzy myself, son," came old Mosley's voice. "But we'll be all right. We've never had such a chance before to see the world and dear knows when we will again! Just look! You can see clear over to the creek from here and about to the house! We must have your mother and let her see what a fine place the world is."

The next thing Daddy Cracknuts and his wife heard was Mrs. Bunnies saying to her husband, "Oh, Den, I do think traveling like this is so improving! How could you and I ever have seen what the world looks like, if we hadn't come today? Look! You can see the saw-saw garden from here and over there is where the watercress grows, 'n' there's the cabbage patch 'n' everything!"

And everybody on the big wheel was oh-ing, and ah-ing and saying what a fine grand view it was.

So when Daddy Cracknuts and Ma got to the top, they said the same thing. "I declare," said Daddy. "This is certainly a fine view, Ma! I'm sure! I'm sure! I'm sure! 30 cents this week from the washing so we could come."

"Well, Daddy, did you and Ma have a nice time?" asked Nick when the squirrel gentleman and his wife were going home.

"Scrumptious!" said Daddy. "That is a fine view from the top of that wheel. It's worth the money."

When they got home to their house in the middle town, Cracknuts caught her husband's arm. "Daddy! Look!" she cried. "We've got 10 times the view here from our own window and it's free. We can see ever so much farther than we could on that old wheel thing."

"So we can," said Daddy soberly. "It's just because we paid for it that we liked it better."

CHILD'S STORY OF THE HUMAN RACE

By Uncle RAY

HOW GARETH WON KNIGHTHOOD

One day, says a Round Table tale, King Arthur was in his castle at Camelot, not far from London. There came before him a youth, tall and strong.

The king liked the looks of his visitor, and asked him what he wished.

"Sir," replied the youth, "I want three favors, but none beyond reason."

"Ask and you shall receive," said Arthur.

"One favor only shall I ask now," said the youth eagerly. "It is that you let me stay here for twelve months."

"That I grant right easily. But what of the other two?"

"I shall tell you when the year is up."

"Very well," said the king. He called Sir Kay, and told him to take good care of the young man.

Sir Kay had an ugly temper. He disliked the newcomer and called him "Fair Hands."

"I'll put you in the kitchen and make you work for your keep, Fair Hands," he said.

The youth was meek and replied with no angry mood. For a year he worked under Sir Kay. It would have been dreary indeed except for kindness shown by Sir Launcelot and Sir Gawaine.

Although Sir Gawaine did not know it, the kitchen boy was his brother.

At last the time came for the youth to ask his two added favors. King Arthur was feeling rather dull that day and sat in the castle wondering if some adventure would turn up.

Sure enough, it came a dandel and said:

"My mistress is shut up in a castle. Give me someone to deliver her."

At this moment the youth left the kitchen and came before the king.

"I wish," said the youth, "that you would let me stay here for twelve months."

"That I grant right easily. But what of the other two?"

"I shall tell you when the year is up."

"Very well," said the king. He called Sir Kay, and told him to take good care of the young man.

Color Cut-Outs

A GYPSY MAIDEN

"Gypsy gypsies!" breathed Betty Cut-out as she and her father were out walking one day. "Look, they're camped back of Fisher's Creek. Oh, I'm glad we walked away out here. I never saw a whole family of gypsies so close."

While they were speaking, a dark haired girl, with flashing blue eyes and a wide smile which showed her white teeth, came across the road. She was about Betty's age. "Hello," she greeted, "you want your fortune told?"

"Oh yes," cried Betty. "Do you tell fortunes?"

The girl shook her head. "My mother tells fortunes. You come! Betty and her father followed toward the wagons."

The gypsy girl has a tan dress, with a sash of many bright colors. She has big gold earrings in her shiny hair.

RIPE OLIVES FATAL TO 3 VACATIONERS
BILLINGS, Mont., July 14.—Three guests at Aldrich lodge, a summer resort about 20 miles from Cody, Wyo., are dead, and several others sick as a result, doctors believe, of eating ripe olives, according to a special dispatch received by the Billings Gazette today. The dead are Mrs. Paul Ache and Paul Ache, Jr., of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a Yale university student named Gillespie.
